MINOR IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

When I first entered Ateneo, I was someone who knew so little about life. I could say I am now more equipped to go out to the real world and fulfill my dreams. I've learned so much through all the precious friends I have met, the difficult exams and projects I had gone through, and all the good and bad things that happened in between. Thank you Ateneo, for revealing to me who I am and how I should lead my life.

My four years in Ateneo were like a protracted football match. My triumphs were sweet - but I learned most from my setbacks and failures. Throughout the game, I was buoyed by the wisdom of mentors, the brotherhood of teams, and the company of friends. I learned that it's not about which position I'm in, but where I ought to dash and strike the ball. In the end, I find my true victory when I realized that every tap, kick, and goal really does prepare me well-- for the field of life.
