“In the end, it’s not the years in your life that count. It’s the life in your years.”
(Abraham Lincoln)

Economics taught me that every choice I make has a cost, so I shouldn’t make any decisions lightly. Accounting taught me to always remember every experience, whether it was a gain or a loss. Math 18 taught me to never take a sign for granted. Philosophy and Theology taught me how hard it can be to perceive the hidden value of some things in life, and that it’s possible to enjoy a sunset and a sunrise without any sleep in between.
