Starting single-blind, in a group of unknowns, having both type I and type II errors. An illusion of control, random selection. Sometimes loafing, sometimes facilitating. Falling into social traps & 20/20 hindsight. Deindividuation. Phobias. Defense mechanisms. The real vs. the ideal self. Anxiety and depression sometimes; self-actualization always. I am not perfect nor complete, but I am closer than when I began. Thank you, Ateneo.

There's this image of Sophie walking through the front doors of a café that captures almost perfectly what she's all about. There's a focused look in her eyes and a certain grace in the way she steps. It's easy to tell that this person dances, acts, draws, and plays all while academically excelling. Sophie is the marriage of talent, passion, and diligence, and that's just the first impression. Her patience and kindness for those she loves go beyond what words can describe.
