Jego is one of those who have developed a passion for constant learning, which is evident in his two specializations—participation in extracurricular activities, and leadership roles in various organizations. Four years later however, I've come to realize that his tenacity is nothing compared to his character. From lunch at Gonzaga to drinks at Drew's, and all the kalokohan in between, he has always been a good friend—a best friend, in fact—one who is trustworthy, thoughtful, and dependable.
