I've learned a lot during my time in Ateneo. I've learned to value my friendships, to work hard, to be patient, and to endure all the challenges that life may bring. But most importantly, I learned that marriage is defined as a covenant by which a man and a woman establish between themselves a partnership of their whole life and which by its very nature, is ordered to the well-being of the spouses and the procreation and upbringing of the children - Canon 1055.

"The plain truth, the path of reason, the light of faith, and the love of friends."

(Horacio de la Costa, SJ)

Four phrases that sum up my four years in the Ateneo. From oral thesis statements to the hunt for electrical sockets, this home holds the fondest moments that truly built me into a resilient person by making me dream more, do more, and become more. Most unforgettably, the bonds that I have formed in this community are the branches that continue to hold my life together.
