

Trisha Gabrielle G. Guillermo

MINOR IN PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Four years in Ateneo has taught me one thing: never be afraid of failure. My college life is an accumulation of numerous failures from academics to extra-curricular. These are the moments that made me see my flaws as opportunities to be better. Yes, people remember the wins, but it is the failures that pushed me forward to achieving success.

Richard Joseph D. Guzman

Don't settle for "I'll go next time". Learn how to balance academics while still enjoying your youth. Take every chance to do so, be it a spontaneous weekend trip or a quick twenty minute adventure. Truth be told, I couldn't personally recall half of the moments that I'll remember the most during my stay in college. However, these were the moments wherein I was having fun with the people who I'll cherish the most even after I go down the hill — so to my friends, both old and new, here's to us!