

Lorenzo Rafael F. Rocha

MINOR IN BIOMEDICAL SCIENCE

To be honest, I just napped through everything. I napped through my tests, classes, orals, and papers; and even during the times I would hang out and drink with my friends, I would nap. The best part is I could do it anywhere like Zen Garden, Sec Walk, on the floor, tables, chairs, you name it. Never underestimate the power of the nap. It got me places, and now I'm graduating. So I would like to thank all the people I met in my four years, and also the naps I took to get to this point.

Peter Carl L. Sacayanan

MINOR IN MOLECULAR BIOLOGY

From afar you'd see him walk in that natural bold way he does, poker-faced and ready to slay that next exam, paper, or project all due that day. He hasn't been quick to decide to push forward with the things he knows he loves, but with the help of his friends and the maturity he gained in his stay in the Ateneo, he's now a "triple threat"! Dancing, singing, and acting—all while being true to himself. He may be small but he is one tough nugget of wisdom. (R. Narag)