Looking alright on the outside, Drina is like an onion. Onions have layers. Drina has layers.

A BuzzFeed article entitled 28 Times The Struggle Was Real equates to the past few years, but we're better after struggling—on the inside.

Arquiel James C. Dimalanta

Amid the photos.

Arquiel seems to be someone who loves being in the limelight, someone who loves getting retweeted and liked on social media. But in truth, what he loves more than anything is to make people happy. Whether it be his friends from different groups or even complete strangers on social media, Arquiel just wants to brighten up everyone's day. For him, every retweet or like he gets isn't proof that he's popular, but proof that he's made just one more person happy. (J. de Jesus)
