A lot of us, while reading this in the future, would often think of how different we were from when we were writing this. Yet, I hope that one thing that I can hold onto when reading this in the future is a lesson: No matter how cruel the world is, I shall aspire to be kind.

My personal motto of “There is no such thing as best, only better,” has been my guiding principle through these 16 years. As a community builder, I’m now ready to serve. As I leave, however, I wish to be remembered not by my pictures and grades, but through what I leave behind. Just find what I’ve built and whose lives I’ve made an impact on. Let them tell my story as I create more chapters out there.

Pictures can only capture moments, but stories immortalize and encapsulate one’s whole life.
