

Carlos Antonio Y. Sison

College has always been a story of finding where to focus my love and determining how much of it to give. It has taught me to invest my love in those who don't get enough, those who have stopped and listened, those who have stayed as well as those who have decided to leave, those you've always wanted in your life, and those who you never thought would be. My challenge now, as I leave college, is to become one who always looks for a love supreme, always asking the question, "How can I love more?"

Zeth Michael O. Soria

"Throw your dreams into space like a kite, and you do not know what it will bring back, a new life, a new friend, a new love, a new country." (Anais Nin)