I'm glad I stayed in Ateneo for 5 years. I got to prove to myself that it's not the end of the world if I don't get straight A's, if I don't make hundreds of friends, if I fail, if I break down, & if I don't graduate with my batch mates. I spent my time here doing the things I love: studying and dancing. Alongside both, I was graced to have met people I can admire. In my last year, I had the chance to do the same, but this time, the most significant change is that I learned to love myself first.
