

Ryan Timothy B. Chua

MINOR IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

Crossdressing, being a best man at a fake wedding, watching the sun rise as I cram another half-hearted paper. More than the education itself, it is the memories and the experiences I have enjoyed that Ateneo has given me that truly matters in college life. But what, perhaps, may encapsulate the insights I have obtained during my stay in the academe is a quote by a wise man known as T-Pain, “People don’t think it be like it be, but it do [sic].”

Johann Stanley D. Co

Entered Ateneo when I was supposed to go to DLSU. Made new friends while losing some old ones. Got my heart broken. Dabbled in different orgs. Tried some martial arts. Broke my leg a second time. Met entrepreneurs during recovery. Started hanging out with successful mentors. Reevaluated my fitness. Started reading again. Just kept going. Yeah, I guess I made the right choice.