

Ken L. Mordeno

4 years in Ateneo have broadened my perspective about what life is. It is definitely not just trying to live a life centered on myself, but also living a life with and for others. Here is to a life dedicated to fighting the good fight.

College has been everything I've always imagined it would be: scary yet thrilling. The Ateneo journey has me constantly caught up in the midst of braving through piles of readings, running away from the many cats in school, squeezing through crowds every hour, and more. Yet, it was during these years that I discovered that there will always be scary things around us. It is but our choice, however, if we will let these stand in our way. For this, I am grateful. Thank you, Ateneo!
