When faced with hardships, never lose courage. You'll never know what life has in store for you. Never think that you have to go through it alone and be grateful to everyone that believes in you, even more than you believe in yourself. Life is a mystery, not a problem.

There was a story about someone having only red paper clip, but ended up having a house. In a series of trades, this person, who seemingly does not have much, was able to turn his clip into a pen, before trading an entertainment contract into a house. Ateneo has taught me a great lesson on how to not limit the way we see things based on their face value. In the future, I hope to turn red paper clips into houses through my work.
