

Alanis Joyce E. Umali

Aside from the stage that she calls her home, she finds equal (if not greater) comfort in the cool and coffee-stained arms of Starbucks. Her dreams are painted with the lights of the Eiffel, but among all the glamour, there's still room for the electric buzz care of Derfs and the simple joys of EK. She's adamant about low expectations, but she still shoots for the stars; she's just a little more prepared to fall but more than willing to get back up. One day, someday soon, she'll shine, effervescent.