

Juan Paulo R. Riego De Dios

I love you, mom and dad.

Paula Camille C. Rivera

She seems like an odd, ditzzy, carefree girl who walks with self-esteem that can bulldoze walls. On some days, she talks about her dogs or her memes, prancing around the dojo doing weird dances. On other days, she talks about her philosophies and insights, the interesting things that happened in her life to make her the woman she is now. There are days where she says nothing, but I can see the tiredness in her bones; but she moves, dances, and throws without a care in the world.