To say that the Ateneo changed me would be an understatement. I thought I was different, but this university taught me that we should all be the same in being men and women for others. I marvel at how this institution managed to help me discover my worldviews and my outlook on life, and how it was able to direct them to the right path. I never would have thought that I could be the person I am today, and I just wish everyone had the opportunity to experience this journey.
