College is definitely one unique experience filled with hard times—when we feel like all hope is gone, when things don't go as planned, and when we have sleepless nights accompanied with countless cups of coffee—but also good times when we feel like anything is possible. All throughout this experience, we encounter plenty of people—those who come and go, and those who stay and help us get through it. It may have been a crazy ride, but we'll eventually look back and think of it as a fond memory.

The four-year-long chapter has come to its conclusion. Although I feel I didn't end up where I initially imagined myself to be, I am beginning to understand that it's where I'm supposed to be after all. It has molded me into a person who is more grounded but also less afraid to embark on my next adventure. For all that, I'm more than grateful and blessed to have taken on this journey and to have those who have helped me carve an identity for myself and develop my character to who I am today.
