“Paulina is the best day of your life. She is the first yellow rays of the sun pouring in from over the horizon, changing the black, blue and sleepy world with a bright, warm, fiery embrace. But, like all other days, the best day, no matter how beautiful, is wasted when we let it slip by. Others may see her as naive and oblivious to despair, but everyday she stands witness to the suffering of the world. She is the embodiment of hope, that each new day brings more love. (C. Joson)

The four years I spent in Ateneo were definitely far from easy. From freshman year until senior year, everything just seemed to get harder. However, as time passed by, I realised that my stay in Ateneo gave me so much more than just my education. I acquired a good work ethic, I made a lot of friends and lasting memories, I crossed paths with numerous great minds and and amazing personalities, and most of all, I was given the opportunity to better myself over the course of four years.
