Ateneo has taught me that it becomes difficult to face the madness that the world offers—difficult unless I've instilled faith in what I can do and what God has given me. It was a struggle to climb, but it is more so heartbreaking to slide down and let go. To move on isn't goodbye as we take within ourselves the heart of an eagle through the succeeding walls to face. I am blessed to be bathed in blue, and all the more blessed to share it with the world.
