There are so many stories to tell from these four years I spent in Ateneo. All the people I met who made every moment worthwhile and all the lessons learned in between. Countless memories made that I'll forever cherish and keep. But only one story is truly worth telling — Jesus'. Because He's been my constant through it all. The one I wake up for each day and the one I live for. He who saved me and called me His. These four years are all for Him.

There is no such thing as too much love. Ateneo has taught me how to truly love — even when it was hard, even when it hurts. I'm going down the hill the same person I've always been, only more so. I've spent the best years of my life with people I've grown to love, with moments I've come to treasure, and with values I've realized. Words may not be able to fully explain how I feel, but one thing is for sure — I will go down the hill with more love to give to the world.
