MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Twenty years ago, round about the years that many of you were born, the Philippines and much of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations or ASEAN were in the center of the biggest financial crisis in modern Asia, thus the Asian Financial Crisis. For example, twenty school years ago in 1997 to 1998, the economic growth rate reversed from 5.2 to -0.6; unemployment rate of 8.2 jumped to 10.6, inflation spiked from 5.7 to 9.4, and poverty incidence (the percent of the population that were poor) were at a high of 28 percent.

Twenty years after, in the school year of your graduation in 2017 and 2018, so much have changed. By the writing of this paper, the economy is projected to grow by just less than 7 percent making it one of the fastest growing economies in the world. Unemployment to this point is about 6 percent which is among the lowest in your lifetime. Inflation is projected to be 3 percent which by your lifetime standard is outstandingly low. But with so much change, poverty incidence remains high at 22 percent.

In connection with your time in the Ateneo, four years ago most of you were challenged to discover or to find out thus the theme "tuklas". The purpose was to challenge you to discover your intellectual capacity and more importantly for you to find your role as men and women for others. As graduates of school year 2017 to 2018, the AEGIS challenges you to converge thus the theme "tagpo". This time, I take this opportunity to challenge you to converge your intellectual capacity with your role as men and women for others.

We credit those who graduated before you especially those in the past twenty years for their use of their intellectual capital to reach the hard earned improvement in the Philippine economy. But going further as graduates of school year 2017 to 2018, I take this opportunity to challenge you as a batch to converge your intellectual prowess with your roles as men and women for others. I plea that you take the challenge as managers, engineers, scientists and artists for others to take your load to preserve the hard earned improvements in our economy, and more importantly, to champion our collective fight against poverty. I plea that you take this challenge all for the greater glory of God.

HOLD ON TO THE WHEELS OF TIME

By Arwin Barrington S. Lao

THERE'S SOMETHING SO SURREAL ABOUT GRADUATION. The seemingly 'finish line' serves as the time to reminisce all the years spent in college. At the same time, this end is where another set of endless wonderful possibilities spring out. It is the moment we all have been waiting for, but also the time we wished it will never end. So much memories have been made and which we cling on to even for just a second. These we imagine before finally going down the hill on our own separate ways.

LOOKING BACK, I NEVER EXPECTED THINGS TO END THE WAY THEY DO. Everything started during freshman year OrSem Tuklas, when we first met our blockmates—new smiles, new people, new friendship. It was a fresh start for everyone. Those were the days spent in discovering the locations of the buildings, searching for our student organizations, and for some, trying to adapt to the cool and green environment. It was also when we mostly bonded with our block. Remember the first CTC- BEL running extravaganza? How about the IntACT classes where we were first moulded into the Atenean students we now are. Nostalgic as it may seem, all our first times happened during this year—our first classes together with the block, our first parties in different organizations, our first best friends, our first crushes, our first grades, and the list goes on.

SECOND YEAR GOT TOUGHER. Many of us had to juggle a load of twenty three units while continuing our journey of finding the right organization that fits our purpose. Add to this the struggle of keeping touch with our blockmates who are now scattered in many classes. We met "hell weeks" that challenged us with what we can do. Six units of Math became the epitome of pressure. We were also greeted with subjects such as Theology, Psychology, Law, History, ITM, Accounting, and Leadership and Strategy. Group works started to fall in line. There came a thrill of not knowing how things would turn out, hoping that our friends would be responsible groupmates. With the right time, we started to get the flow of things. Understanding systems inside the Ateneo and also trying to be "magis" in everything we do. Everything. This was also the time where we started to worry more, "Do I really belong in this organization?", "Is my QPI high enough?", "Why do I feel like I haven't done enough?" Those were some of the most depressing days in college as many started to question their choice of course and contemplated to shift from one course to another. We had our own journeys, but one thing's for sure: we all wanted to step up our game.

THIRD YEAR HAD STARTED. We became more independent as we made our own class schedule. This meant that we have to go to some classes alone. For many, it's the time where we all grew the most as some went to find their personal growth in JTAs. Others still became the best that they could be by deciding to stay. We encountered more Accounting and LS subjects. We were also introduced to Philosophy, Marketing, and Operations Management. We learned the "what ifs" in Philosophy, the "customer segments and positioning" in Marketing, organizational behaviour in LS, and stocks and bonds in Accounting. There's more to those subjects of course, but fundamentally, we learned to see things in many other perspectives which made things all the more meaningful. This was also the time when we finally tried out for JSEC Challenge since it's the last time to join, so as they say, "YOLO". By this time, we realized that only one year is left and time seemed to flee so fast. And so we told ourselves, "In my last year, I will try new things I have been scared to do. Things will be amazing."

It is in Ateneo where we grew together with our family and friends. It is here where we searched for our true calling.

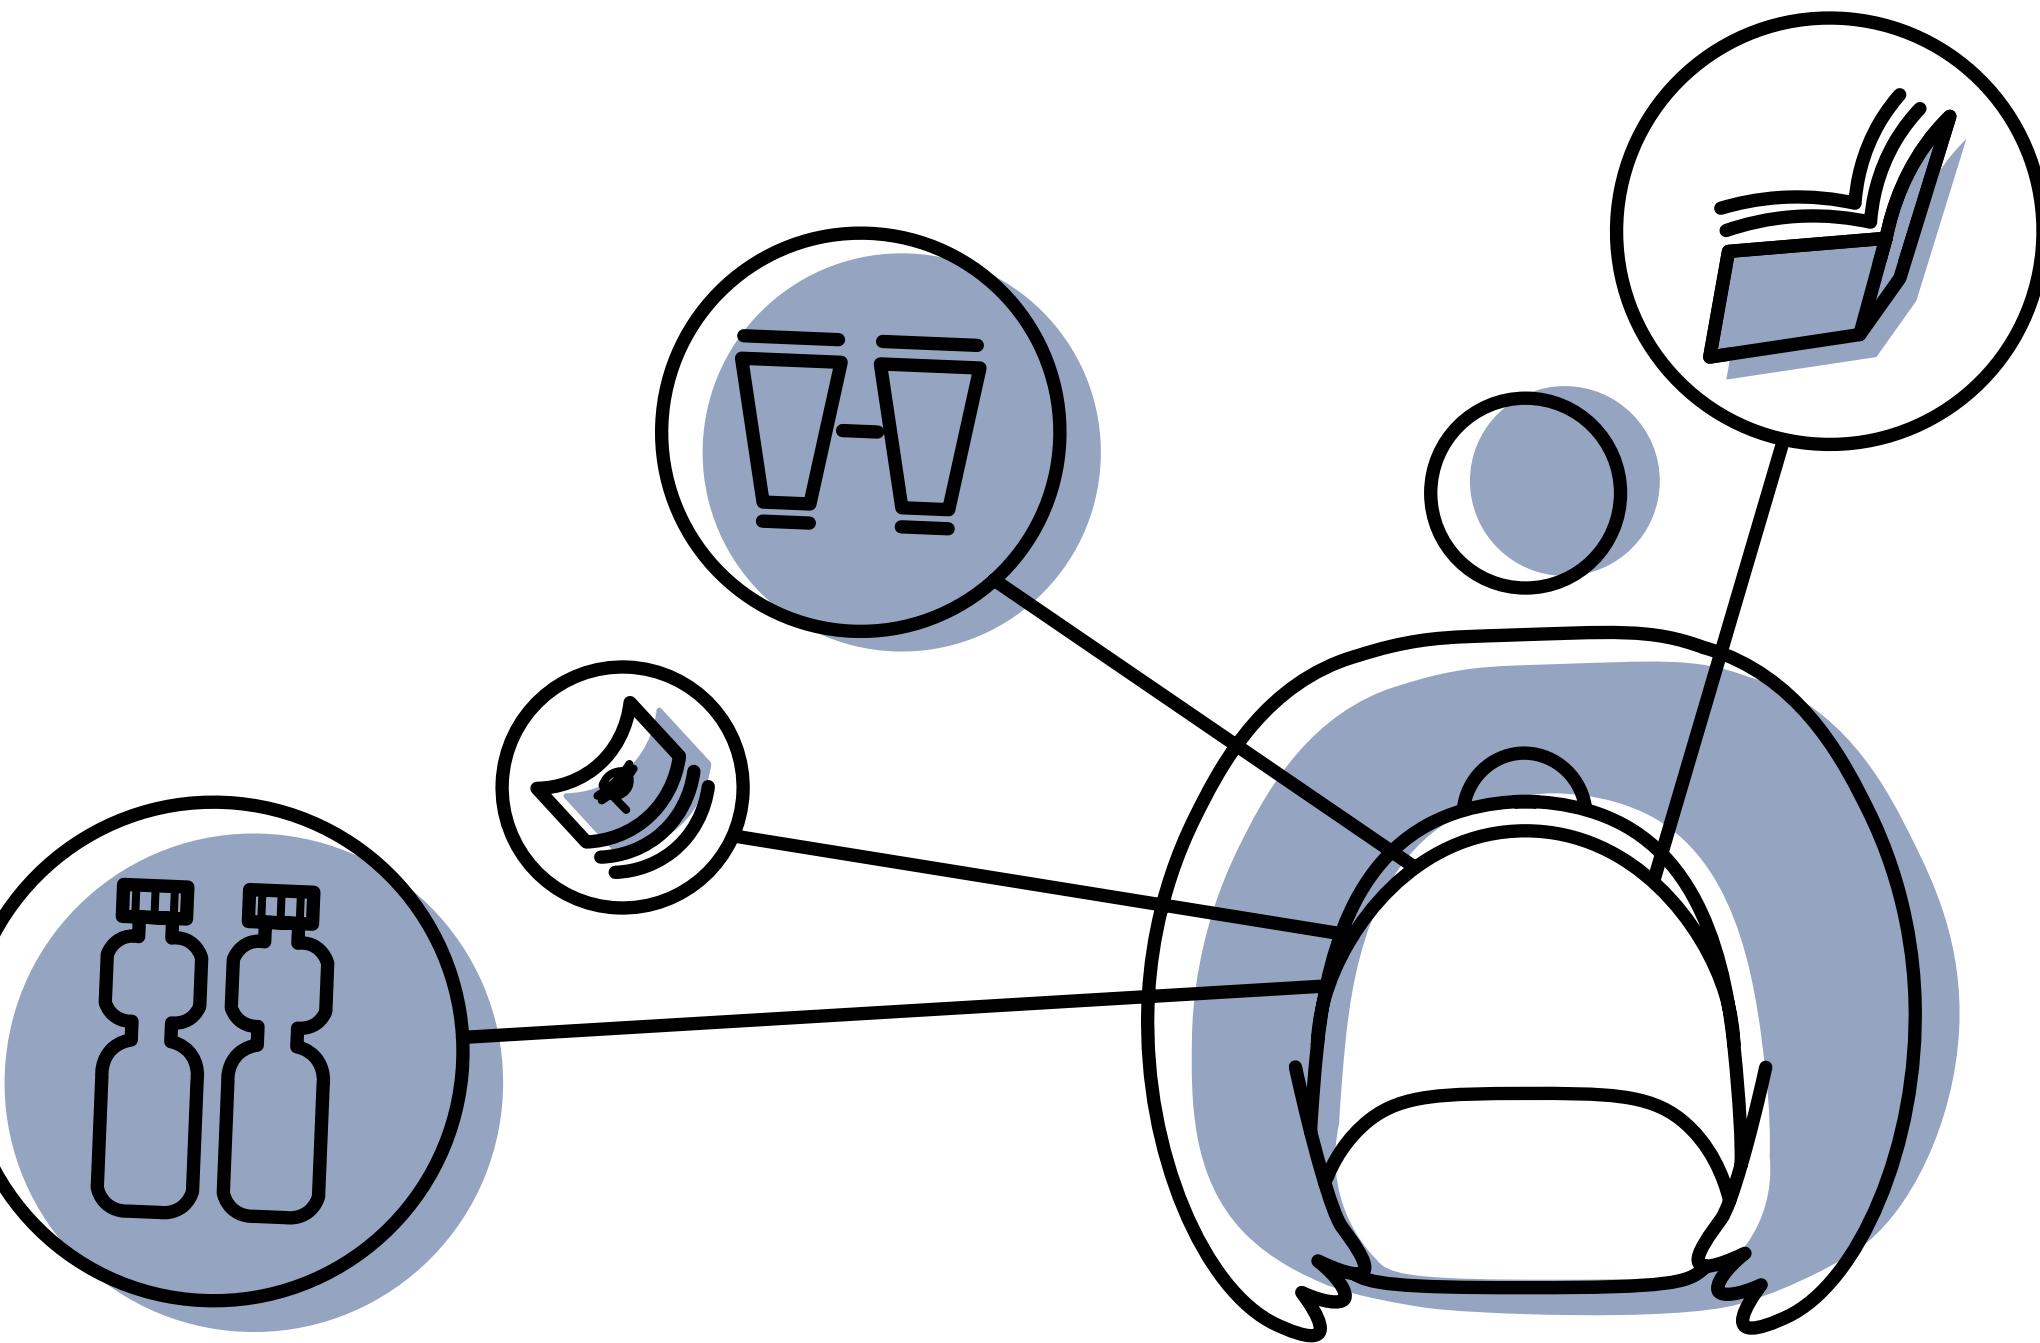

OUR LAST YEAR WAS THE YEAR WHEN EVERYONE STARTED TO FEEL LIKE ORSEM WAS JUST YESTERDAY. It was called "the thesis year." Most students fell ill of senioritis with all the last subjects: Philosophy, Theology, LS. We started to realize, where did the time fly? And of course, we started to question what we will do after all this. The reality that we are going to graduate soon and be part of the real world became more real. Our last projects together with the organizations we love, our last classes with friends we would treasure for a lifetime, our final defenses that hold the gravity of our grades. By this time, we would wish for things to slow down. We started to go out of our comfort zone as we tried to experience moments we had missed. It felt like riding every last ride in an amusement park, we savored each turn, and before we knew it, it has already closed forever. The only thing we could do is to look back to them as memories.

IT WAS A LONG JOURNEY INDEED, BUT WE HAVE FOUND OUR HOME IN ATENEO amidst all the trials and tribulations that we have faced as students. Now that we are equipped for all the challenges that lie ahead in the world outside, we must remember our roots and where it all began. It is in Ateneo where we grew together with our family and friends. It is here where we searched for our true calling.

We all have our own journeys. As we get closer to our own destinations, the most we can do is to hold on to these beautiful memories to fuel ourselves as we continue to stir the wheels of life.

MINOR IN LITERATURE (ENGLISH)

One moment you are taking a stroll with the breeze running through your hair, the next you find your face flat in a puddle. You are met with a seesaw of ups and downs, a slide from one failure to another, and a swing of changing interests. You question why you are there in the first place but, sometimes, where you want to be is not the same as where you need to be. You take a detour. It takes you elsewhere, and you think to yourself that it isn't so bad after all—maybe it's even better.

Crystal Marie S. Arcega

Before coming here, I thought the only way to become a better person is to rebuild myself from the ground up—to forget my past and keep it in the back of my mind. It took me 4 years to realize that I have to look back and find my old self—to see it in brand new eyes and believe that it can help me be better. This would not have happened without the help of the friends and family that I have created here in this place. Thank you Ateneo, for everything. I am who I am now because of you.

MINOR IN HISTORY

To my cat, Kitler, who will never get the chance to sneer at this lofty achievement.

"What's in a name?" Shakespeare once asked. Beatrice, a name nothing short of striking, is she who makes others happy. She is the bringer of joy. However, our Bea certainly gives Shakespeare a run for his money. Bea effortlessly lightens up a room with her presence alone even when she doesn't know it. It's amazing how much joy can radiate from a 5-foot girl. But if you've known her long enough, you wouldn't be surprised at all. Beatrice, our Bea, is quite possibly joy herself.

MINOR IN SUSTAINABILITY

Life for me remains to be walking on a path towards something greater. Ateneo taught me that we walk, run, and crawl to reach our goal. Sometimes, we can sit and allow ourselves to watch the sky. As we voyage, we make lasting relationships each step of the way with people who cry with us in pain and laugh with us in joy.

Ultimately, I learned that there are many ways to live out our lives. We must be brave enough to see these possibilities in order to soar to greater heights.

Patrisha Armie W. Bas

Ein Hauch von Tüll: A touch of tulle was the way I entered, holding onto a piece of innocent hope with every step of this journey. It was the way I built my identity all these years, as I brightened people's days and faced every storm. Throughout my adventures in Ateneo, the tulle has weathered just as I have. Yet, although it seems that I am trading in my tulle for something sturdier as I go down the hill into new adventures, I am simply exchanging it for a new one.

Kindness and integrity. There are two traits that are hard to balance. Throughout his whole stay in Ateneo, this person has exhibited these traits by giving others the benefit of the doubt and consideration while maintaining and staying true to his values. This person is someone whose values are evident through all the aspects of his life and will continue to stay grounded as he goes down the hill. He will soar to new heights because he is ultimately capable of achieving great things.

Sound is faster than light. You can hear her voice echoing long before you can see this one big ball of energy. She radiates positivity and tends to ignite the passion of everyone around her. She epitomizes tenacity and breaks the mold of expectations as she does everything with utmost confidence in her own unique flair. A natural born leader, a fierce competitor, a genuinely caring companion—a lot of words can describe her but none can encapsulate how amazing she is.

MINOR IN INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

It was in college where Kristian sought and found who he truly was: someone snarky, brave, straightforward, yet incredibly kind. He is the person you seek solace from, but what he'll offer instead is likely an unapologetic, sometimes sarcastic, shoulder to cry on—which honestly, is what you needed anyway. As college is about to end and he continues to seek where he's truly meant to be, even when he eventually finds it, you'd long for his friendship, honesty, and unending sarcasm. (G. Araos)

Not a lot of people will succeed when occupied with a multitude of commitments. Not a lot of people will come running to their friends at the first hint of difficulty. Not a lot of people will go out of their way for people they don't even know. Not a lot of people will devote their limited time and energy to listen to you at a moment's notice. Not a lot of people can love in the most genuine way possible. Not a lot of people can be all of these things, but he Ken.

A young girl entered Ateneo with a heart full of dreams and expectations. She didn't prepare for the sleepless nights, numerous breakdowns and countless setbacks...but she also didn't prepare for the life-changing professors, irreplaceable people, and unforgettable experiences inside and outside the classroom. Through it all, I just hope that young girl is proud of the person walking down the hill. We did it, b!

But no matter the passion, he pursues them with the same determination and dedication. Inspired by Rocky Balboa, Chris doesn't lose the grip on his dreams, as he advances into the unknown future. He must fight just to keep them alive. It's the eye of the tiger.

Jeremiah Y. Carlos

From collaborating with my groupmates in order to submit each marketing pass, to staying up 'til the wee hours of the morning just to review and rehearse for oral exams, the Ateneo experience has both broken me down and built me up. But more than these academic endeavors, it's the relationships and bonds that I've formed and fostered along the way that have helped define who I am and what my purpose truly is: a purpose that originates not from without, but from the One that lives inside me.

Danielle Nicole F. Casaje

It takes a village to raise a child. I have the Ateneo education and community to thank for teaching me to face it all with a clear mind and a strong heart. I will always have college to look back to - the struggles and successes, the laughter and tears. And I will always remember how Ateneo has taught this child how to love others, be strong not only for myself and be faithful to the Lord. Ateneo is the village I am beyond grateful for, for my college days will always be in my mind and heart.

Ysabel Beatrice L. Castro

I never would've thought my most memorable moments in college would be found in breaks spent with random groups of people, all-nighters with classmates turned life-long friends, and evening walks around campus (especially during the Christmas time).
Thank you, Ateneo. You're everything I've ever dreamed of and more.

Patrice Chantal O. Chan

One thousand four hundred and sixty days in the Ateneo.

MINOR IN FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT

Kung mayroon man akong napagtanto sa apat na taong pananalagi sa Ateneo, iyon ay ang matutong magpaubaya nang hindi nagpapabaya. Kaya sa punto ng walang kasiguraduhan, hinihingi sa atin na harapin ito, kasabay ng laging pagpiling magmahal at maniwala mapapasaayos din ang lahat. Para sa mga kapwa ko nagsipagtapos ngayong taon, patuloy lang sa pagtataya!

Masasabi ko lang: Para ito sa mga kaibigan na kasabay ko sa iyak at tawa ng buhay. Para ito sa mga guru na walang sawang gumagabay. Para ito sa mga nginig-tuhod na orals. Para ito sa mga oras na nakaupo sa library. Para ito sa Kythe. Para ito kay Clifford, sa mga bata, at kanilang pamilya. Para ito sa pagkakataon na makilala ang mundo. Para ito sa mga magulang kong dugo't pawis ang inay.
Masasabi ko lang,

Whenever I was bombarded by sleepless nights, I daydreamed. I imagined myself drowning in my passion, painting the image of the future I was willing to sacrifice my nights for. "The most effective way to do it is to do it." And no one does it better than Betts can. Betts is a smart, driven, and passionate leader. Ateneo has trained her to be a woman who is a doer and maker of things. The beauty she holds is not seen only by the way she looks, but in her will to be unapologetically herself. Everyone knows that nothing is more attractive than a woman who is confident. It really is no wonder that everyone bet on Betts, the girl who is both the glitter and the light.

What is there that is not to love about Gino? For one, he can be your best friend who will push for hangouts even if it is just to waste time with you at home. He can also be your brother who you could just grab a beer with and talk to about anything under the sun. He is that true blue Atenean, steadfast and heart-strong for the greater glory of God. Most of all, he became my college sweetheart, a charming prince always speaking and acting from the heart.

Antonio Carlos G. Escolin

"Anton Escolin, that name will stick in my mind probably forever. When you see Anton, he looks like a gentle looking fellow, yet he doesn't eat like one. Anton maybe silly or childish sometimes, but when he has work to do he is locked in and he is very focused in what he's doing. In our do or die game against FEU he had an inspirational message that he sent to Coach Tab that touched and helped us. He showed his love and dedication to the team through the little things and details." (B. Andrade)

 Ateneo since Prep that means I'm True Blue If you ever talk to me expect a joke or two
 I love to play ball, host, and dance and air-conditioned classrooms so I can wear pants
 When I'm out with my friends that's when I'm truly living
 even if five to nine I'm always in training
 When all is said and done, and time has run up remember Anton and put your freaking hands up!

The Ateneo has been my second home for the past 16 years. It has been a tough journey of discovering new experiences, meeting people, and balancing school work with personal life. As I go down the hill, I will surely miss the entire campus and the people I've encountered in it. This institution has not only taught me about MAGIS and cura personalis, but also instilled the values of what a true Atenean should have. I will forever bleed blue.
 Thank you, Ateneo!

A message to my older self (and I know it's cliché but, who knows? I might need it):
 1. Don't ever think you can let me down. I hope you've finally learned to forgive yourself by now.
 2. Always be sincere and authentic. Take care of yourself and never forget to appreciate those around you.
 3. And if the ocean of life leads you to somewhere unexpectedly far out, remember it's okay to take a break from it all and just start anew.
 4. I love you.

As my favorite line from 100 na Tula para kay Stella goes, "then a pebble, now a boulder." I can say that I came to Ateneo as a pebble and now leaving as a boulder. I was a sixteen year old girl who had little faith in herself. Compared to everyone else, I felt small as a pebble, but Ateneo taught me to believe in myself and that comparing myself to others will lead me nowhere. From there, I grew into a boulder. I'm leaving as a better person, a work-in-progress, but still better nonetheless.

I have reached this point and I still don't know where I am going or what I am doing. I think I'll just continue winging it and looking fabulous while I am at it.

Here's to the Red Bulls and iced coffees, the all-nighters and cram sessions, the orals and the long tests. My Ateneo journey was never easy, but it has always been worth it. I will forever be grateful to the people I've met, the obstacles I've conquered, and the love I've received along the way. To the school that has been my second home in the last four years, I cannot be who I am today without you. Thank you, Ateneo.

I have gained a lot throughout my stay in Ateneo but, among everything, I've gained weight the most. However, in between the meals that I have partaken in, lie precious memories with irreplaceable people. What I've found and will cherish are the individuals that have made my stay worthwhile. I've had the time of my life and I owe it all to you you you you dirty bit. Thank you to my family, friends, and dogs. Most importantly, thank you to The Black Eyed Peas. "The Time (Dirty Bit)."

"Once Rhian told me, 'Surround yourself with people who feel like sunshine.' She will always see the good in you, even when you're at your worst. She will believe in you when you start doubting yourself. That's how genuine Rhian is. She has her own struggles. I've seen her get tired, feel down, and lose motivation, but she always makes it through. She's my daily living reminder that life is beautiful.

I guess she doesn't know enough, but she is my sunshine." (C. Gadiano, 2017)

Perhaps the most appalling thought to cross my mind regarding my stay in Ateneo is that after four years of Jesuit education, while I was in the process of learning myself, developing proper study habits, cramming papers, carrying groupmates through projects, teaching InTACT, and procrastinating, I must have spent at least a whole semester's worth of tuition on coffee.

When Cali says "I can do it," she really means it. In fact, she goes beyond what is asked and accomplishes them without regard for the tedious process that comes with it. She can make all her responsibilities in org, school, and at home fit within a day with time to spare for her loved ones. Basically, she's superwoman. Though tiny-framed and baby-faced, her inner strength is as massive as "The Rock" Johnson. Tough times have proven that she is capable of moving mountains.

From the test failures to the hell weeks, there would always be laughters with blockmates, or a shoulder to cry on. A hug from a friend, or a professor who tells you the wisest of words that you never knew you needed—these little things kept me going. My college life surprised me because it's not all about the fun. There would always be struggles, stress, and heartbreaks. However, what matters the most is what you do next. You stand up. Thank you Ateneo (my dream school) for being my home for the past 4 years! From ORSEM, block bondings, sleepless nights, oral examinations, selling phone cases, makeup bookings, Katipunan inumans, south adventures, beach trips, birthday celebrations to graduation - these are the experiences that I will hold for a lifetime. Thank you for making me the person that I am today, and for bringing out the best in me. Lastly, thank you to everyone who supported me and believed in me!

Leaving home was one the hardest decisions I had to make four years ago. It was difficult and painful, yet full of anticipation. As my time in Ateneo comes to a close, I am not short-handed of memories, this I am sure of. Here's to all the all-nighters and cups of coffee, to all the break-downs and lost sleep. To my friends and family and to God, I would forever be grateful and indebted. Looking back, Ateneo is a choice that I would make all over again; in a heartbeat, a thousand times over.

If I were to tell Ateneans that I'm from Romblon, most of them would respond, "Where's that place?" Only a few people in Romblon have merely dreamt of studying in ADMU; only some of them take the ACET. An Ateneo alumnus from Romblon convinced me to take the test. I am grateful to that man for giving me the priceless experience of being an Atenean. I still have little emotions of disbelief that I am so close to getting an Ateneo diploma. I never wanted to leave for Ateneo. It entailed saying goodbye to home and trying to find who I was in the absolute uncertain. However, Ateneo made me realize that I had to leave. Leaving came with meeting passionate souls that gave me pieces of their world, with meeting tarnished spirits who have had enough of the world's beatings and finding comfort in each other. Leaving led to being with other people. It was in leaving that I found myself: a me among the we.

As human beings, we have been blessed with the amazing gift: the gift of love. Our lives may be short and insignificant in the vastness of this universe, but to ourselves and to those we touch throughout our lives, it can be as meaningful as can be. There is no greater feeling than knowing that you did everything you possibly could, and there is no grander gesture than putting love in whatever you do.

Never thought I'd experience this much growth, love, joy, and stress in just four years. Thank you, Ateneo, for being my home, for teaching me the true meaning of love and service, and most importantly, for helping me realize life's why's when times get tough. From the highest of highs and lowest of lows, it's true what they say that everything will fall into place eventually. It was all a bliss and I wouldn't have it any other way. I'm where I am today only by His grace.

I've lost and found myself countless times in my four years here, somehow finding meaning in all the chaos with the help of good friends. As I leave to lose myself and find myself elsewhere, I know that it doesn't really matter where I go or who I become as long as I never run out three things — love, patience, and humility. Thank you Ateneo, I am overflowing.

It's in Ateneo where I continued to know myself through others. Where true learning happens beyond the classroom walls, where I could grow through every success and failure. However, the thing that I learned the most is to trust: trusting others, but especially myself. To trust that I can do the impossible when all odds are against me and to have the courage to go on without knowing what's up ahead. And with this trust, I march ahead a better man than I was yesterday.
Thank you, Ateneo.

"Ady is the kind of person people remember. She is headstrong, independent, and way beyond her years. Throughout the ups and downs, she always approaches everything with wisdom and compassion. Interestingly enough, she also constantly underestimates herself, but as far as I've known Ady, she never fails to leave an impact in everything that she does. Change was something I've always been wary about growing up, but in my four years in the Ateneo, I've learnt that change is a friend, and like a friend, it must be welcomed with open arms. It is in embracing new opportunities and challenges that we are able to better ourselves—going outside our comfort zones and seeing things in new perspectives. Ultimately, I have learned that life truly opens up once we ourselves do.

"Tuesday. Another coding day comes around which means I enter and leave school with almost no one in it. Dull as it may seem, this was rarely the case because of Kent. He makes time feel like a breeze with all the laughs and experiences we've had. It's all natural for him. He gives his time, energy, and heart to others up to a fault, and this kind of love is almost always underappreciated and unnoticed. To describe Kent as selfless is an understatement as he is so much more." (R. De Vera)

Danica Isabella A. Cortez

My four years in Ateneo have taught me that sacrifices are as important as hard work, falling in love can be excruciating, and that pain can be beautiful. Classrooms can be safe havens and battlefields and that people can go from strangers to family. These are just some of the lessons learnt on the Hill that have made me a better person today and I'll be forever grateful for them. When I entered college, I was amazed with the various cultures bannered by people. This dared me to explore, discover and find myself. The Ateneo has more than challenged me to be a better version of myself in the best way possible through mandatory programs that ultimately defined me. When you get thesis statements that you don't like;
When you're late for a class you opt just to trice;
When you don't think that you're able to get through hell week;
When the chances of bringing your grades up is bleak;
When you feel nervous before a defense;
When you fall short of what you expect.
But through the hard times, the joys, and the tears,
You'll just keep on asking why you're still here.
But, over the hill, when you see the sun set.
You'll come to see that you have no regrets.

My 4321 story:

Four years here was no short of a roller coaster ride: from all nighters, oral exams and org projects. A thrilling journey that left me three things to bring: explore, learn and breath. A simple two part reminder: live in the present with the idea that the world holds so much more than we could ever know. An unforgettable journey, an irreplaceable part of me, all leads to one thing: one dreamer. A dreamer that sees both the realities of this world and the potentials of an uncertain future.

"You don't need to save the world to find meaning in life. Sometimes all you need is something simple, like someone to take care of." (Aegis, Persona 3)

Sa kanyang paglingon, hindi niya malilimutan ang mga sandaling puno ng kagalakan, pati na rin ang mga panahong nilunod ng luha. Hindi niya rin maaaring kalgitaan ang mga kaibigan at mga guro na nakilala at nakatulong sa kanyang paglago bilang isang ganap na tao. Higit sa lahat, lagi niyang aalalahain na patuloy na mangarap hindi lamang para sa sarili ngunit para rin sa iba. Lahat ng ito ay nakatatak na sa kanyang pagkatao dahil sa paaralan na humubog sa kanya. Kaya Maraming Salamat, Ateneo!

Jeremiah T. Ruaro

I'd like to use this write-up as an opportunity to thank the people who have helped me as I went through the most stressful, yet fulfilling stage of my life: college. To my parents and family, thank you. Shout out to my boys JR, Luigi, Richard, Calu, Jay, Rob, and the gang. You already know. To my blockmates and the Eboys, thank you; you are my family. To my professors and the Ateneo community, you will be forever treasured. You will all be missed, and so will I. May we live forever. Sensei Out.

Jefferson S. San Agustin

Sa paghahanap ko ng lahat ng sinubukan kong hanapin, paulit-ulit lamang akong nawala at nagpaikut-ikot. Sa bawat tanong na sinubukan kong hanapan ng sagot, humantong lamang ako sa mas marami pang mga tanong. Naligaw ako at napunta sa mga lugar at taong hindi ko kailanmang inakalang matatagpuan ko, ngunit sa huli, sa aking pagkaligaw, nahanap ko ang sarili ko.

Katrina Liane D. Saria

Since day one, Kaye was already the sassiest person in the block. Four years later, she still is. But more than that, because of countless memories and laughter, she's also the best college buddy anyone could have. She's made an impact on so many people and she's one you can depend on, no matter what! She's overcome so many challenges already, and will continue to do so.

"Trisha is a true friend that you want to keep forever. She's the type that would make you feel comfortable talking to because of her affability. You wouldn't spend a dull moment with her as she is filled with amusing and interesting stories of herself and her two giant brothers from childhood; it'll never fail to brighten your day! If you want to feel loved and appreciated, be Trisha's friend! P.S. If you want great food, visit her house and let her cook and bake for you!" (J. Velasco)

Jesus Miguel C. Suntay

"The mention of his name is enough to make anyone raise an eyebrow. The cool-going Miguel Suntay can be described in many ways: lover boy, rich kid, Godfather. However, he is known to most as a great friend. He is constantly roaming the walks of Ateneo, garnering acquaintances and solidifying friendships. It is his biggest —his affability and always welcoming nature—that allows anyone and everyone to approach him. And so love him or hate him, he'll still make you double take." (C. Bautista)

Jenica Loryn Y. Sy

Jenica is the embodiment of "small, but terrible". Standing at 5'1", she courses her way through school silently, seemingly unbothered by everything going on. What people don't know is that beneath that unbothered face is a girl with a convivial aura. What sets her apart are her bright eyes and the way they crinkle when she smiles. Unapologetically frank and caring, she has a little bit of everything in her. That's what makes her one of the best friends you could ever ask for.

Coming from a small city, the vast world of Ateneo blurred me of my true aspirations. However, my dream to constantly be a better version of myself helped me grasp this wider spectrum. College taught me that life could be as simple as a three step choreography. First, take one step forward to visualize where you want to go. Next, slide backward and take a moment to look back at your roots. And finally, just groove, let go and sway to this dynamic rhythm called ".

Growing up, I simply subsisted in the every day — the common. Then came Ateneo. I thought that my stay here will just be filled with days of studying, meeting with friends, and ultimately graduating with the Atenean title to get a decent job —the common. Instead, as I met extremely intellectual, talented, and versatile people, I was challenged to go beyond the everydayness of life, to dream, and to become ambitious! For that, I'll always be a proud Atenean. Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam!

For everyone I've met along my Ateneo adventure, thank you. Just a simple reminder: when life gives you lemons, take it with a grain of salt, and use it for all your ice breakers and your identity. In the end, make the best lemonade and lemon squares anyone could ever imagine, but remember it should taste good to you first before anyone else. Then, sleep.

As someone who loves to travel and explore, itching to go on an adventure everywhere and never remaining stagnant, I never would have thought leaving a place and the people I have come to know and love could be this heartbreakingly painful. It pains me to have to say goodbye to this adventure, to go down the hill and be what Ateneo has cultivated me to be: a woman for others Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam. But despite my departure, I know I will always have a home to come back to in Ateneo.

In the past 16 years that I have spent in the Ateneo, I can say that this institution has become such a cherished home to me. The Ateneo has enabled me to meet professors who have taught me what it means to aim for MAGIS even when the going gets tough. This process is all the more made easier with the people who eventually became my friends. Their inspiring efforts made realize the love and care they have for my dreams and their own aspirations. I have always been on the lookout for my happiness, and the happiness I can give to others. What these four years taught me is that it is not something you look for, but something you experience everyday and share with others. The past years were filled with both fun moments and undeniable hardships. With people whose hearts are filled with unconditional kindness and care, everyday, I am able to work towards the person I aspire to be — strong, kind and passionate. For that, I am most thankful.

MINOR IN FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT

Giving, supportive, and kind are a few words people would often describe me as. A genuine man for others as they would call it even though deep down, I know I have not embodied it fully. They say I was willing to go the extra mile to extend help and be there through breakdowns and rejections even to people I just met. Little do they know that I slowly became a better version of myself through them. I owe it all to them. I want to leave this question, do we really need a reason to help others?

Datu Amir E. Wagas

The company of lifelong friends, the wisdom of inspiring professors, the challenges we overcame and the ones we couldn't, the storms we endured and those we couldn't weather, the success and failures, the good times and the bad—they've taught us to do more, to be more, and above all, to love more. Ateneo, your lessons will always light our path, and as I leave your halls, I promise this: that I shall go back to my people, the Bangsamoro, to do the greatest lesson you taught me—to serve.

Life in Ateneo hasn't been easy—heavy workload, intense long tests, stressful orals and thought-provoking papers. These four years have been challenging, but I've learned a lot—what it means to give it my all and more importantly, how I want to live life beyond my college years. It hasn't been perfect, but there's a lot to be thankful for: my friends, family and so much more. The world has never seemed bigger, but I've never felt so ready to take it head on. Here's to the future!

My stay in Ateneo reshaped my philosophy in life from putting importance on just the big moments to also the little ones. So go ahead, push that elevator button for someone even if they don't ask you to, get to know the cafeteria lady and her life story, stay in bed and watch your favorite show on a Friday night. These moments, no matter how little and insignificant they seem, matter.

Hundreds of pages turned
Tens of friendship forged
An overflow of tears shed,

Through my 4 years in Ateneo, I've learned that not everything will go my way, and not everyone will remain by my side, but that's okay. What matters is that I keep going, because every now and then, there will be moments that will make everything worth it.

Angela D. Barranda

Better late than never is what I always say. This is not only a reflection of my college life, but of my drive to do whatever I can to get to the finish line despite the hurdles as well. Delays have come in the form of missed alarms, shameful walks into the classroom 10 minutes past the bell, insane Katipunan traffic, and even late life realizations, but in between are moments that couldn't have happened at just the right time otherwise. I'm not always on time, but I'll get there eventually.

Monica Beatrice M. Belen

Being the lone Blue Eagle in the family, going into Ateneo was a daunting experience. Nevertheless, it's been an amazing journey and a true discovery of myself. I just want to thank my blockmates, my professors, my org-mates for everything that has helped me to become who I am today. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity to be in this university, and it's about to come to a close. For these four years, I am truly grateful.

College was one hell of a ride. Every year always had something new in store for me. Amidst all the sleepless nights, it was here in college, where I had many of my firsts. It was where I discovered so much about myself. I learned to take risks. I made lots of friends. Ultimately, I learned to put myself out there; to learn to be comfortable with feeling uncomfortable; to grab every opportunity available and to try new things every day. This is where life begins—at the end of your comfort zone.

This chapter has come to an end and I can say that this was all worth it. I would do anything to relive those moments of bliss.

I remember the first time I set foot inside Ateneo – how the guards greeted you good morning, how the kuyas helped you park, how the ates lead you to the right building. That is when I knew I made the right choice. Although these 4 years have definitely challenged me, knowing that there is a loving community endlessly supporting me makes everything worth it. Thank you, Ateneo, for showing me how it is like to love and to be loved – something that can never be learned elsewhere.

Camille bought a backpack and decided to go on a four-year adventure and climb a hill called "college". The trail was laced with piles of readings, terror profs, seemingly endless work, and unexpected encounters. To the Ateneo Blue Symphony Orchestra, the organization that taught me the importance of passion. I wouldn't trade months-long rehearsals, meetings and dinners where we chat endlessly, and the opportunity to be on and share the stage with these people, for anything else. I owe my development (in all aspects, be it musically, in leadership, and ability to cram) to them. From ups and downs, they've seen it all. I am grateful for four years of creating music with this family. To many more.

I've spent almost 8 years now in the Ateneo and along the way, I've made countless memories, new friends and some, I even treat like family. But it can't be helped that somehow I push people away, and I am sorry about that. The Ateneo is where terror profs dine with brilliant minds, where your greatest joys reflect your saddest cries, where the rustic grounds meet the starry skies. So if you find your future stuck with no sort of traction, may you be reminded of this most beautiful intersection. Keep your head on the grounds, but throw your eyes to the skies. May your tears bring you beers — you have one brilliant mind. Cheers!

Embrace failure. Love the unknown. Don't be afraid to explore every opportunity you can to test your own limits and surpass yourself. If there's one thing my college journey has taught me it's that if you keep moving forward with an openness to learn and to love, all paths will eventually lead to a home. To all the friends who filled that home for the past four years, I cannot thank you enough for tempering my heart and for making the prospect of saying goodbye so painful.

MINOR IN DECISION SCIENCE

I often refer to myself as a child because I'm a small girl. Going through college, I realized that I'm just a tiny droplet in a bucket full of water, just one among many others who aspire to make a difference, a child among the crowd. But being a child also means being filled with wonder, hope, and excitement. Though I may not be where or who I imagined to be when I entered Ateneo back in 2014, I know that like a child, I will continue dreaming bigger, aiming higher, and working harder.

Coming into college, I was full of arrogance, delusions, and lofty goals. It stripped me of all of those right from the start. College gave me a clean slate, which I dirtied, stained, and broke many times over. It wasn't a perfect slate. It wasn't as shiny, nor as enormous as those of my peers, but it was mine and I loved it. Truly grateful for this school that helped me grow into a man, everyone who helped me on my journey, and for my Wi-Fi for allowing me to submit this right before 11:59.

College was a terrifying beast, ready to charge at me the moment I arrived. It was a stunning wake-up call to the reality I would experience outside of school. It was daunting, unnerving, and sometimes seemed insurmountable. Yet here I am, 4 years later, changed for the better. Challenged but unfazed. Beaten but not broken. I faced college head-on and have no regrets with the way it turned out. Molded by countless classes, friends, and organizations, I wouldn't have had it any other way.

He's the versatile and all-around guy who excels not just in academics but in sports and music as well, the guy who low-key beasts on and off the court. Thank you, Ateneo, for the colorful sunsets I never failed to admire; for the lessons that extend far beyond the classrooms; for the bonds I formed with extraordinary people; for the journeys thousands of miles from home; for what I gained after buckets of coffee and sleepless sleepovers; for my growth as a student, as a Christian, and as a person; for being a home I truly felt I belong in.

Thank you for welcoming a clueless five-year-old boy and teaching him how to live; for giving confidence to a lost preteen, then eventually grounding an entitled teenager; for molding the conscience of a once stubborn high schooler, and teaching him the values of a true Atenean; and, most of all, for giving him sixteen years to find the people whom he will share all of life with. This journey may be at an end, and another one is about to begin, yet I cannot help but wonder at encounters made along the way. From picking "dark horse" professors to enlisting in classes with friends to taking opportunities, Ateneo's culture and system embody the holistic mixture of divergent subjects and individuals to promote inclusive development - much like how Theology and Philosophy indirectly enrich one's interests. It truly is "The" Ateneo - a meeting place on the hill like no other.

In Ateneo, we learn to strive for a better world. But with the world as it is now, it may seem unattainable. So, remember this:
"Do not let your fire go out, spark by irreplaceable spark in the hopeless swamps of the not-quite, the not-yet, and the not-at-all. Do not let the hero in your soul perish in lonely frustration for the life you deserved and have never been able to reach. The world you desire can be won. It exists, it is real, it is possible, it's yours." (A. Rand, Atlas Shrugged)

Adrian Spencer T. See

"Nothing is impossible, the word itself says 'I'm possible!' (A. Hepburn)
Looking back, it was a dream to graduate as a true blue Atenean. A dream fulfilled. I am proud to call myself an Atenean. I am grateful for all the people and experiences that shaped me into the person that I am today. These memories will forever be cherished. Any dream can be achieved as long as one believes in himself. It was truly a one of a kind experience. Thank you, Ateneo.

Amid the struggle of satisfying expectations and making ends meet, it is easy to lose track of what is important. It may seem as if you are standing only through your own two feet for the road ahead. However, keep in mind that you are the product of an institution that teaches how your life is not merely yours. At the end of the day, the choices you make will add more sense and meaning into your life, in line with your response to the call to serve.

Moments with her can vary from endless laughs to the deepest conversations – each memory just as colorful and spontaneous as she is. I am glad that the world is about to experience a person filled with warmth and passion.

Wilvyn Christian C. Tantongco

Change is both defined and opposed by constancy. Here's to all the paradoxical moments and people in my life – the moments and people I look back, forward and away from. Each of you have defined and opposed the person I am in whatever timeline I am in today, and that's just how it is. Life always finds its way to be a paradox. Suffice it to say though, through time, more than the challenges and celebrations we face, never forget to love, hope and dream. Through this, we become fully alive.

To change, I think, is essential. Not just because we are sinners and in need of the struggle to be better every day, or because we are human and face the volatility of life from time to time. But in a life where we meet different people, survive different tragedies, encounter extraordinary love, and have the capacity to transform even the most insignificant moments into moments of greatness – to stay the same despite all this, would be heartbreaking. Embrace change.

1200. Give or take a few days, that's roughly the number we're given to change a life. To change someone else's or to change our own. Yet how many of these days do we spend wishing to be somewhere else? How many chances have we let pass us by? Whether we know it or not, whether we're willing to accept it, these are the days that count; the hours we've been given to laugh, love and make a lifetime-worth of memories.
I certainly do hope I was able to laugh and love enough in these past 4 years.

We all came here looking for something: how to slay our demons, how to know God, how to find ourselves. Over the years I asked about all this, made friends, met mentors, learned lessons. Some questions were answered, and the rest may not have any. But, once we go down the hill, what's important is we just ask, always going and always discovering. Hopefully whatever our vocation is, we can use it to give the world the love it never thought it deserved, above all the fame and fortune we may get.

Our potential as actionable creatures lie beyond our corporeal bodies. Our transcendental essences embody the absolute animus that propel us to examine and achieve greater proficiency. Our material bodies largely serve only as a medium. In light of this Ateneo serves as the pylon that allows even the most meager individual to peregrinate along the fine line that differentiates the most astute men from the fools and laggards. Ateneo allowed me to transcend that essence. Allowing me to be more.

My Ateneo journey was a journey of MAGIS—not through straight A's or countless orgs, but something much more. It was a journey of self-emptying: tiring nights of acads, orgs, and making time for friends and family, but more than that, it was a journey of self-fulfillment: picking myself up from every failure, cherishing every success, and finding my place in this world. A journey is never easy as much as we'd want to think it would be. One way or another, it's bound to get difficult. Yet, it's these difficult moments that we remember the most, not just by what they made us feel and what they made us into but also who was with us. It's the people that went through these hardships with me that make such moments worth reliving. So I thank you, Ateneo, not just for the way you made me and the lessons you taught, but for also bringing these people into my life.

How do you make the most in one's college life? I learned that there is no one good answer to this. Some focus on getting good grades that to give themselves the best chance to succeed. Others make memories with their new friends. Whatever makes you feel the happiest is what you should do. You do you; never let anyone else tell you how to live your life. I wasn't the smartest or the most active, but these were some of the best years of my life because I lived it the way I wanted to.

College was a messy journey with a lot of twists and turns that led to nowhere. Finding what I wanted in life was not easy compared to some of my batchmates. After a year of failure and three years of toil and trouble in academic and social life, I have a small idea. It is not much but, for me, it's the perfect starting line. I am grateful for my friends, family and the small quirky organization I love for helping me get here. Maybe life is about acknowledging things other than yourself.

To the institution that has taught me through countless failures and successes that I am more than capable of becoming a better version of myself, the end of my journey here just marks the beginning of a brighter future ahead of me. I will forever be grateful not only for the knowledge passed unto me and for the amazing people I've met but also for the time that I was able to call this place my home. Thank you Ateneo, this experience has definitely been fulfilling and worthwhile.

I have always been clueless, but now I'm clueless with a college degree. Here's to the best four years to date-- spent all my allowance but never felt more whole, found family in the ate and kuya personnel, said "I don't know" over 1000 times but had more certainty than ever - and realized that the bounds of Katipunan are nothing short of home.
Thank you for the 16 years, Ateneo-- especially for all the traffic I passed going to and from Alabang every single day.

Ateneo has molded me into the person I am today, and for that I am grateful. Thank you for the heartbreak failures, the sleepless nights, the countless frustrations, and the petty fights-- for it gave way to me discovering, among other things, my strengths, my weaknesses, my values, and most importantly, my support system. Thank you for the four years Ateneo, and thank you to the people who have been with me every step of the way.

Although I might not remember most of the concepts learned or thesis statements memorized, my time in Ateneo taught me something greater- to value friendships over connections, life lessons over grades, and principles over security. Most of all, I learned to be unapologetically myself-- more secure in my own identity and principles than ever before. We will all grow old and venture different paths, but it is my hope that we never forget who we are and where we all started.

As I leave the Ateneo, I will be leaving the comfort of everything familiar to me – the race to secure a JSEC table, camping out for hours in the lib, the ease of meeting new people – and entering the uncertainty the world holds. Amidst this, I have learned the importance of the virtue of hope – to find comfort not only in the familiar, but also in the unknown. Cheers to the next chapter after these four years!

There is beauty in transience. Though the infamous buildings will always remain, the unique combination of people who I've chanced upon in campus, be it a block mate, an org mate, a teacher, or even a classmate for one semester, can only happen once in a lifetime. I am the product of an intersection of laughter-filled lunches, frill free trips, deep conversations, and cram nights. Ateneo was once simply my dream school. Little did I know, it'd mold me and create doors for me to reach my dreams.

Creating - perhaps our most important skill, yet the most underrated at the same time. In Ateneo, we were always creating - papers, presentations, reports, and ideas. However, we were also creating so much more than we were aware of. We created feelings, memories, and experiences, whether good or bad, and whether we wanted to or not. All of these helped us create the most important thing: a new sense of ourselves. With this, we step out of Ateneo still continuing to do the same thing: creating.

There was a story about someone having only red paper clip, but ended up having a house. In a series of trades, this person, who seemingly does not have much, was able to turn his clip into a pen, before trading an entertainment contract into a house.
